GENERAL INFORMATION

Scope. The Journal of Optimization Theory and Applications publishes carefully selected papers covering mathematical optimization techniques and their applications to science and engineering. Typical theoretical areas are: direct methods, calculus of variations, dynamic programming, gradient methods, linear programming, game theory, inequality theory, boundary value problems, and numerical methods. Typical areas of application are: aerospace engineering, civil engineering, mechanical engineering, chemical engineering, electrical engineering, mathematical physics, and mathematical biology. It is hoped that the journal will appeal to mathematicians, scientists, and engineers, and that the interaction between mathematicians and engineers will prove to be beneficial to both.

Types of Contributions. The journal publishes five types of contributions: Survey Papers, Contributed Papers, Technical Notes, Technical Comments, and Book Reviews, the latter by invitation of the Editors.

Submission of Papers. Manuscripts, in triplicate, may be submitted to any of the Associate Editors or the Editor-in-Chief. Positive recommendation of any of the Associate Editors and concurrence of the Editor-in-Chief constitute approval for publication.

Text. The text should be typewritten using triple spacing. English language should be used. An abstract must be included.

References. For maximum clarity, abbreviations should be avoided in the references.

Drawings. One glossy photograph of each drawing should be included.

Style. Upon acceptance of a manuscript, the Editors reserve the right to introduce formal changes consistent with the overall style of the journal. This applies to such items as numeration of sections and subsections, numeration of equations and references, footnotes, and citation of equations and references throughout the text. In order to minimize these changes, authors are advised to consult previous issues of the journal.
